SO, WHAT IS GOOD WORK?

The Good Work program is a joint effort between the Little BIG Foundation and your landlord EG, to build and maintain happy, healthier, kinder communities at work. We aim to foster a sense of belonging that reduces loneliness and contributes to a positive work environment.

Each year we conduct a survey, speak to tenants, carry out focus groups and interview the building management team to gather feedback to understand the interest areas of those working in the building. We ask them what would help them connect. Why? Because the world is becoming a lonely place and coming to work should be good for you.

It is our goal to make this a community where the little 'hellos' can lead to big connections.

GOOD WORK AROUND THE (OUNTRY

We have surveyed the community here, in your building, as well as many other office communities around the country. We have also reviewed the latest research on social connection, and we noticed some themes.

The workplace, though transformed, remains a vital space for prioritising mental health and meaningful connections.

- 1. The pandemic has heightened the importance of workplace interaction in combating loneliness.
- 2. Not all employers are equipped or know how to support employee mental wellbeing at work.
- 3. A significant portion of workers recognise the value of returning to the workplace for more meaningful connection opportunities.

Workers in Sydney's business districts experience 10% greater loneliness than national averages.

81% of respondents were unsatisfied with the sense of community within their building.

33% of people aged 26-34 year's old are experiencing loneliness.

Employees in their first year of employment with a new organisation are 20% more likely to be lonely.

Tenants have a desired for communal spaces in which to meet and allow them to come together.

96%

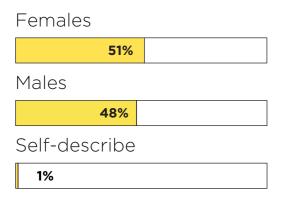

of respondents showed an appetite for in person events and activities to build connection.
